The Outsourcing Programme

Data Gathering: Best Practice

The Outsourcing Programme, based in the Cabinet Office, is collating examples of where the public sector working with the private sector has delivered value for money, innovation or transformation in delivering public services.

Following a successful first phase, working in collaboration with the CBI, we are aiming to widen our evidence base and reach out to more organisations to gather best practice examples. The aim of this exercise is to inform future procurement activity and, building on the implementation of the Outsourcing Playbook, continue to improve how government and suppliers work together to achieve better outcomes.

We want to capture detailed, robust examples and ask that all examples are submitted through the attached excel form. This will enable us to better collate the data, draw out detailed themes and identify commonalities which can be used to inform our future work.

We welcome examples from all suppliers (including SMEs and VCSEs) who have provided services across central government and the wider public sector recognising the vast nature of government procurement.
